Some Paintings: The Third LA Weekly Annual Biennial
Curated by Doug Harvey
12 January - 16 February
Track 16 Gallery

"Some Paintings," the third LA Weekly Annual Biennial, curated by the alternative paper's stalwart art critic, Doug Harvey, features work, none of which has previously been exhibited, by over 70 living Los Angeles painters. The press release describes Harvey's curatorial premise as an idiosyncratic and optimistic love letter to an art form that is seemingly very much alive and kicking in Southern California. Among the artists in the show are Allison Schulnik (above), Chris Pate and Amir H. Fallah, both of whom I have written about in previous top tens for Saatchi Online. For a full rundown of the artists in the exhibition click here. The opening promises to be lively with performances by the Spirit Girls, Wounded Lion, and John Kilduff of Let's Paint TV.
